C1-Forensic Practice in Employment Cases

James J. McDonald, JD, Newport Beach, CA

Recent legal developments provide forensic psychiatrists with significant opportunities to become involved with workplace legal issues. This course, taught by an attorney specializing in psycho-legal issues in the workplace, will first examine the various employment laws that include a mental health component (Civil Rights Act, Americans with Disabilities Act, common law). It will then provide a "litigation roadmap" illustrating the various points during the legal process at which the psychiatrist may make a meaningful contribution. It will also reveal numerous practical tips to assist the psychiatrist to interact more effectively with the attorney, such as budget issues and avoidance of fee disputes, obtaining records, case formulation, preparation for testimony, etc. It will then explore several topical areas, such as the impact of the Daubert ruling on psychiatric testimony, privacy and privilege issues, the importance of personality disorders in employment cases, and to what extent discovery into a plaintiff's sexual history is permissible. It will also explore key issues relating to the forensic psychiatrist's role under the ADA, such as the fitness-for-duty examination, confidentiality of employees' medical information, and the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission's Guidance on psychiatric disabilities under the ADA.

THURSDAY, OCTOBER 19, 2000

2:15 PM - 6:15 PM

COST $50.00

C2-Establishing a Forensic Practice

John Ouligian, MD, Mercer, PA
Steven H. Berger, MD, Loganspoint, IN
Christiane Tellefsen, MD, Baltimore, MD
Stuart Kleinman, MD, New York, NY
Dominic Ferro, MD, Nanuet, NY

Forensic psychiatry is recognized by the ABPN as a subspecialty of psychiatry. The application of psychiatric knowledge and experience to specific legal questions requires psychiatrists to act outside their roles as clinicians. The need for expertise in the legal arena is considerable; however, residency training inadequately prepares psychiatrists to meet this important societal need. The purpose of this course is to educate the clinician about the legal justice system, and the need for psychiatric experts. It is directed at clinicians interested in performing forensic consultations and those with some experience but little formal training in the area. It is also directed at graduating forensic fellows who will soon be setting up practice. The course will examine the process of contracting with attorneys, the legal requirements for psychiatric experts, and preparation of psychiatric legal reports. Since forensic referrals are received through channels different from clinical referrals, we will discuss strategies for marketing these services. Forensic cases will be presented to provide examples of the above concepts. This course provides an introduction to forensic psychiatry and prepares the participant to meet the growing and changing demand for psychiatric legal evaluations.

FRIDAY, OCTOBER 20

8:00 AM - 12:00 NOON

C3-Using Research to Improve Risk Assessments for Sex Offenders

Richard B. Krueger, MD, New York, NY
R. Karl Hanson, PhD, Perth, Australia
David M. Greenberg, MD, Perth, Australia

Recidivism and risk assessment are becoming increasingly important, both for the area of corrections and in decisions regarding patients in mental hospitals. New treatments and treatment approaches are being developed for sex offenders, including community notification, medication treatment and sex-offender specific treatment programs.

It is critical to evaluate treatment outcome, and one of the main ways of doing this is through recidivism research. Judges, pre-release boards in prisons, and sentencing evaluators are all interested in the assessment and prediction of risk and of recidivism. This course will present information on five types of risk assessment, will identify types of risk factors which are appropriate to a particular context, will distinguish between factors for which there is a well-established link with sexual offense recidivism and those factors with little or no support, will identify factors which should be considered in conducting risk assessments, and finally will present empirical evidence supporting or not supporting various risk factors. This course will cover Hanson and Bussiere's 1998 meta-analysis of sex offender recidivism studies, an actuarial risk scale for sexual offense recidivism, the Static-99, and present recent developments in risk assessment with sex offenders.

Jack Valenti, MBA, Chairman and Chief Executive Officer, Motion Picture Association of America

Jack Valenti was born in Texas, educated at Harvard, and has been a bomber pilot, an advertising executive, a Special Assistant in the White House and is presently a leader in the movie industry. L3 - MENTAL HEALTH LAW IN CANADA AND THE UNITED STATES

Right Honorable Madam Chief Justice Beverly McLachlin, P.C.

Born in Pincher Creek, Alberta, Madam Justice McLachlin received an M.A. and LL.B in 1968 from the University of Alberta. She was admitted to the Bar of Alberta in 1969 and to the Bar of British Columbia in 1971. She practiced law in Edmonton and Vancouver until 1975, after which she became Lecturer, then Associate Professor, and Professor at the University of British Columbia. Justice McLachlin was appointed to the County Court of Vancouver and then to the Supreme Court of British Columbia in 1981. In 1985, she was appointed to the Court of Appeal of British Columbia. In 1988, she was appointed Chief Justice of the Supreme Court of British Columbia. Her appointment to the Supreme Court of Canada was in 1989 and she was appointed Chief Justice this year. This extraordinarily fast progression in appointments is attributed to Justice McLachlin's outstanding legal abilities. She was the author of the Winko decision, a major case that upheld the constitutionality of the law setting up a Criminal Code Review Board to review patients found not criminally responsible on account of a mental disorder. The decision also mandated the responsibility of the CCRB to show that the individual should not be released, shifting the burden of proof in those cases.

C4-Assessing Parents in Child Abuse and Neglect

Richard Barnum, MD, Boston, MA
Robert Kinscherff, PhD JD, Boston, MA
Jay Blitzman, JD, Boston, MA

This course articulates the four fundamental questions common to all child abuse and neglect cases: 1) facts of abuse or neglect; 2) harm to the child; 3) current parental capacity; and 4) amenability to treatment). It focuses on assessment of the third question, noting its important relationships with the others. It provides a framework for understanding the basic functions which parents are expected to provide, organized around concepts of "care" (cognitive stimulation and support, discipline, and support for development of emotional relationships) and "protection" (assuring physical safety and well-being and the meeting of special needs). The developmental changes in children's capacities and needs imply a variety of different parental challenges and skills for children of varying ages. Presenters offer specific approaches to defining and assessing those skills. Assessing specific parental risk and pathogenic characteristics in special syndromes such as sexual abuse perpetration and Munchausen Syndrome by Proxy will be featured. Participants will learn how to organize written reports of parental assessments, and provide sound, relevant opinion statements relevant to current fitness and prognosis. The course will include short video illustrations, and a longer video exercise enabling participants to practice using this assessment scheme and developing clear opinions.

C5-Understanding Risk Assessment

Michael Norko, MD, Durham, CT
Madelon Baranoski, PhD, New Haven, CT

The assessment of risk for violence in psychiatric patients has growing significance in clinical, policy, legislative, and forensic decisions. The advancement of population-based and community-controlled studies of mental illness and violence, and the emergence of risk assessment measures that have found favor with the courts in quantifying future dangerousness are defining the practice, policies and standards for risk assessment. Familiarity with the relevant research, the legal and clinical issues that shape the practice and relative merits of the different assessment tools is becoming essential to the practice of forensic psychiatry. This course will present a framework for understanding the role of psychiatry in risk assessment. The presentation will explore the strengths and limitations of various approaches to determining risk through a critical review of seminal research on the correlates of violence and a critique of the assessment of the relative accuracy of prediction of dangerousness. An analysis of the appropriate use of actuarial versus clinical assessment will be presented, as well as an approach to the task of risk assessment that accommodates a synthesis of available research.

C6-Competence and Responsibility in Juvenile Court

Richard Barnum, MD, Boston, MA
Robert Kinscherff, PhD JD, Boston, MA
Jay Blitzman, JD, Boston, MA

Increasing stakes in delinquency proceedings have led many jurisdictions to take seriously the potential importance of competence to stand trial and the insanity defense for juvenile defendants. Some states are establishing special procedures and standards for addressing these issues with juveniles. This course will review the legal contexts in which these issues may arise (including juvenile, waiver, and criminal proceedings) and the professional role ambiguities common in dealing with juvenile cases. It will present current research on adolescent development and psychopathology which should inform forensic practice in this area, focusing not only cognitive development but also on the problems of judgement, peer and family influence, trauma, impulsiveness, and emotional instability which particularly affect adolescent understanding, communication, and decision making. It will provide a detailed structure for conducting forensic evaluation of competence and criminal responsibility with juveniles, focusing especially on addressing multiple sources, attorney and family involvement, and special communication issues with children. It will address the important practical consequences which may ensue from raising forensic questions with juveniles, including those both supporting and obstructing effective mental health treatment.
