AMERICAN ACADEMY OF PSYCHIATRY AND THE LAW 2010 ANNUAL MEETING

GOALS:

To inform attendees about current major issues in forensic psychiatry and afford them opportunities to refresh skills in the fundamentals of the discipline, engage in discussion with peers on the standards governing the profession, and update their present knowledge.

CME TARGET AUDIENCE:

Psychiatrists and other physicians working at the interface of law and psychiatry.

OBJECTIVES:

Participants will improve their competence or performance in forensic psychiatry in the following three areas:

- 1) Service, including treatment of forensic patients, development of service delivery strategies, and enhancement of consultative abilities at the interface of psychiatry and the legal profession;
- 2) Teaching, including new methods of training of forensic psychiatrists and classification of the tasks and functions of forensic psychiatrists; and
- 3) Research, gaining access to scientific data in areas that form the basis for practice of the discipline.

ACCREDITATION:

The American Academy of Psychiatry and the Law is accredited by the Accreditation Council for Continuing Medical Education to provide continuing medical education for physicians.

The American Academy of Psychiatry and the Law designates this educational activity for a maximum of 31.5 AMA PRA Category 1 Credits™. Physicians should only claim credit commensurate with the extent of their participation in the activity.

LUNCH SPEAKERS

The Brain on Trial

Helen Mayberg, MD

Dr. Mayberg is Professor of Neurology and Psychiatry and the Dorothy Fuqua Chair in Psychiatric Imaging and Therapeutics at the Emory University School of Medicine, where she heads an integrative depression research program. Current projects focus on development of imaging biomarkers predictive of treatment response and optimal treatment selection for individual depressed patients at all stages of illness. Dr. Mayberg, a Board Certified Neurologist, trained at Columbia's Neurological Institute in New York, with fellowship training in nuclear medicine at Johns Hopkins. She received a BA in Psychobiology from UCLA and an MD from University of Southern California. She is active in the Society for Neuroscience, the American Neurological Association, the Organization for Human Brain Mapping, and the Society of Biological Psychiatry where she is this year's President. Among various honors, she is the recipient of the Falcone Prize in Mood Disorders Research from NARSAD and the Roche Award for Translational Neuroscience, and was elected to the Institute of Medicine in 2008. Dr. Mayberg has served as an expert witness in a variety of criminal and civil cases where brain-imaging evidence has been introduced for purposes of causation or mitigation.

Indigenous Ways of Justice: Healing Individuals and Communities

Carole Goldberg, Esq.
Duane Champagne, PhD

Carole Goldberg is the Jonathan D. Varat Distinguished Professor of Law and Director of the Joint Degree Program in Law and American Indian Studies at UCLA, where she teaches Federal Indian Law, Tribal Legal Systems, the Tribal Legal Development Clinic, the Tribal Appellate Court Clinic, and Civil Procedure. She also serves as a Justice of the Court of Appeals of the Hualapai Tribe, and as a hearing officer for the Morongo Band of Mission Indians. Professor Goldberg is co-author of a casebook in the field of federal Indian law, American Indian Law: Native Nations and the Federal System (6th ed. 2010) (with Rebecca Tsosie, Elizabeth Rodke Washburn, and Kevin Washburn) and co-editor and co-author of both the 1982 and 2005 editions of the leading treatise in the field, Cohen's Handbook of Federal Indian Law. She has published articles and books on a wide range of subjects in federal Indian law and tribal law, including state jurisdiction on reservations under Public Law 280, individual rights issues in Indian country, and the constitutionality of federal and state classifications favoring Indians. Her most recent book is Defying the Odds: The Tule River Tribe's Struggle for Sovereignty in Three Centuries (Yale University Press, 2010, with Gelya Frank). She and Professor Duane Champagne are co-authors of a major report, Law Enforcement and Criminal Justice under Public Law 280 (2008), and recently received a $1.5 million grant from the National Institute of Justice to conduct a nationwide study of the administration of criminal justice in Indian country. Through her work with UCLA's Tribal Legal Development Clinic, she has assisted Indian nations in drafting their constitutions, legal codes, and intergovernmental agreements.

Duane Champagne is a member of the Turtle Mountain Band of Chippewa from North Dakota. He is Professor of Sociology and American Indian Studies, a member of the Faculty Advisory Committee for the UCLA Native Nations Law and Policy Center, Senior Editor for Indian Country Today, and a member of the TLCEE (Tribal Learning Community and Educational Exchange) Working Group, and contributor of the education chapter to the United Nations Permanent Forum on Indigenous Issues' (UNPFII) State of the World's Indigenous Peoples Report. Professor Champagne was Director of the UCLA American Indian Studies Center from 1991 to 2002 and editor of the American Indian Culture and Research Journal from 1986 to 2003. He has written or edited over 125 publications including Social Change and Cultural Continuity Among Native Nations; Native America: Portraits of the Peoples; The Native North American Almanac; Social Order and Political Change: Constitutional Governments Among the Cherokee, Choctaw, Chickasaw and Creek, and Social Change and Cultural Continuity Among Native Nations. Champagne's research and writings focus on issues of social and cultural change in both historical and contemporary Native American communities, the study of justice institutions in contemporary American Indian reservations, including policing, courts, and incarceration, and policy analysis of cultural, economic and political issues in contemporary Indian country. He has written about social and cultural change in a variety of Indian communities including: Cherokee, Tlingit, Iroquois, Delaware, Choctaw, Northern Cheyenne, Creek, California Indians, and others. He is currently co-principal investigator on a $1.5 million grant from the National Institute of Justice to conduct a nationwide study of the administration of criminal justice in Indian country.

Reevaluating Juvenile Culpability and Evolving Standards of Decency

Bryan Stevenson, Esq.

Bryan Stevenson is the Executive Director of the Equal Justice Initiative in Montgomery, Alabama, and also a Professor of Law at the New York University School of Law. His representation of poor people and death row prisoners in the deep south has won him national recognition. He and his staff have been successful in overturning dozens of capital murder cases and death sentences where poor people have been unconstitutionally convicted or sentenced. Mr. Stevenson has been recognized as one of the top public interest lawyers in the country. His efforts to confront bias against the poor and people of color in the criminal justice system have earned him dozens of national awards including the National Public Interest Lawyer of the Year, the ABA Wisdom Award for Public Service, the ACLU National Medal of Liberty, the Reebok Human Rights Award, the Olaf Palme Prize for International Human Rights, the Gruber Foundation International Justice Prize and the prestigious MacArthur Foundation Fellowship Award Prize. He is a graduate of Harvard Law School and the Harvard School of Government. He has published articles on race and poverty and the criminal justice system, and manuals on capital litigation and habeas corpus.

COURSES

Report Writing: Restraints, Reasoning and Refinement

Phillip J. Resnick, MD
Nancy Coomer, JD
Honorable Howard Fell
Ezra Griffith, MD
Richard Martinez, MD, MH
Ted Schmidt, JD

This course will be useful to both novice and experienced forensic psychiatrists because it will emphasize what our employers (judges and attorneys) value most in our reports. Although faculty will discuss the body of the report, special emphasis will be given to writing the opinion section in a clear, persuasive ethical manner. Tips on report writing style will include the separation of fact from opinion, avoidance of jargon, "pregnant negatives," and length of sentences and paragraphs. Participants will learn the importance of narrative story telling and ethical issues involving interactions with attorneys about report content. Legalists will tell participants their preferences in civil and criminal reports regarding length, degree of detail, and how they like to see opinions supported. Participants will see a 9-minute videotape and write insanity opinions, which will be critiqued in small groups.

Review of Clinical Neuroscience for Forensic Psychiatry

Jacob Holzer, MD
Montgomery Brower, MD
Manish Fozdar, MD
Robert Granacher, MD
Hal Wortzel, MD

This course will provide a review and update relevant to forensic psychiatric practice. Topics will include functional neuroanatomy, including the limbic system, memory systems, language areas, and frontal/subcortical networks, neurobehavioral, psychiatric mental state, and cognitive examinations, with attention to areas impacting on thought, mood, perception and orientation, important to forensic psychiatric evaluation, and relevant neurodiagnostic assessment, with a focus on uses and misuses of neuroimaging. Following this review, a forensic psychiatric civil or criminal case involving brain injury will be presented and discussed, with audience participation, covering aspects of assessment, working with an attorney and the courts, reporting, and testimony, from the viewpoints of both opposing sides in the case.

Can't Work or Won't Work? Psychiatric Disability Evaluations

Liza Gold, MD
Donna Vanderpool, JD
William Stejskal, PhD

Disability evaluations are functional assessments intended to provide administrative or legal systems with information it can translate into concrete actions such as awards of benefits or legal damages. Work disability is the result of a dynamic process between factors internal to the individual and external factors not limited to work impairment. The presence of a psychiatric diagnosis does not automatically imply functional impairment, and functional impairment, when present, does not necessarily result in disability. Psychiatrists are not the final arbiters of disability decisions: their role is to provide information to arbiters that facilitate fair and reasonable decision-making. Providing the needed information and requested opinions is facilitated by developing a case formulation to explain the complex relationship between impairment and disability. Comprehensive disability evaluations should consider medical, psychiatric, personal, social, economic, and workplace factors, utilizing a work capacity model. Evaluations should provide information about specific psychiatric impairments and associated dysfunction, correlated with specific job requirements and work skills. This course will review information gathering, assessment models, typical requested opinions, relevant psychological testing, guidelines for assessment, and risk management and legal liability issues.

Psychological Testing for Forensic Psychiatrist

William Campbell, MD, MBA
Madelon Baranoski, PhD

Psychological testing is often requested by forensic psychiatrists to inform and support diagnostic conclusions and to bolster written opinions and testimony. This course is designed for the forensic psychiatrist as a consumer of psychological testing. Topics will include what questions can and cannot be answered, what to ask for, what to expect of the testing, and how to use it. The faculty will review the process of psychological testing, the applicability and limitations of the various tests for diagnostic and forensic questions, and their vulnerability to Daubert challenges. Cognitive, personality, sexual deviance, and risk assessment measures (including actuarial tests), and methods of assessing malingering will be reviewed, as well as the process for choosing tests, the characteristics of relevant interpretation, and the merits of different ways to incorporate psychological results in a written forensic report and testimony. A series of case studies that focus on common forensic scenarios will illustrate the advantages and limitations of psychological testing, the process of collaboration between forensic psychiatrist and psychologist, and methods of preparation for cross-examination when psychological tests are used. The course includes didactic presentation and interactive participation to highlight challenges and ethical issues.
